Christmas picture bingo

1. Draw a grid with three rows and three columns.

2. Fill it with nine different pictures: a star, mug, tree, mitten, gift, bell, snowflake, scarf, and cookie.

3. A caller names items in any order. Cover a matching picture with a pencil mark.

4. The first player to complete a row calls “Christmas!” Swap callers and play again.

Mix the picture positions on each board so everyone has a different card.

Build a North Pole story

Start with: “On a snowy morning, an elf found a mysterious mitten.” Each player adds one sentence. Keep going until everyone has had three turns, then make up an ending together.

Extra fun: Include a squeaky sleigh, a dancing snowman, and a very polite squirrel.

Christmas would-you-rather

- Would you rather drive a tiny sleigh or ride a giant snowflake?

- Have a talking tree or a singing snowman?

- Wrap presents with the elves or help feed the reindeer?

- Visit a cocoa castle or a gingerbread village?

- Wear jingle-bell slippers or a hat that gently glows?

- Make the world’s longest paper chain or its smallest ornament?

There are no wrong answers. Ask “Why?” and let everyone explain their choice.

Finish the festive drawing

1. Draw one simple shape on a piece of paper: a circle, triangle, or curving line.

2. Pass it to the next player, who adds something Christmassy.

3. Keep passing until everyone has drawn once.

4. Give the finished picture a silly title and tell its story.

Play at your own pace. Partners can describe ideas while another person draws.
